After upgrading to 6.1 I think the help functionality has become significantly worse! In principle it may seem as an advantage to use the PDF documentation but for my use this now has become very, very awkward to use when there is a little bit of load on the Unix computer I'm running idl on. Is it because of the size of the PDF documentation or have we possibly installed the 6.1 version wrong in some way? To run the idl programs goes just as before with or without heavy load on the computer (of course a bit slower with large load) but to scan the PDF Help has become almost impossible. Very frustrating I must say. Is there a way around this? Or has this already changed in the new 6.2?? Many thanks for any hints!
