
Subject: Re: Silent errors in run-time

Posted by Craig Markwardt on Tue, 18 Oct 2005 23:13:36 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

otto.hyvarinen@fmi.fi writes:

```
>> You need to "redirect output". Syntax varies slightly depending on which shell >> you are running. In csh (and tcsh) I do something like this >> idl >>& my_idl_log
>
> Unfortunately this doesn't help, because IDL opens a _window_, that > needs to be clicked at. I can redirect my stdout and stderr where ever > I want, but it doesn't make any difference. It is an IDL problem, not a > shell script problem, I sincerely believe.
```

I'm coming into this a bit late, but here's a suggestion. If you don't use graphics, why not do "unsetenv DISPLAY". IDL won't put up a window if it doesn't know that a windowing system exists.

Craig

--

```
-----
Craig B. Markwardt, Ph.D.   EMAIL: craigmnet@REMOVEcow.physics.wisc.edu
Astrophysics, IDL, Finance, Derivatives | Remove "net" for better response
-----
```