
Subject: Re: Newbie's question

Posted by ChiChiRuiz@gmail.com on Fri, 21 Oct 2005 18:22:06 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi James,

The x values are air temperatures in comparison to the ground, ie. if the air is cooler than the ground (a shadow or shade), then the value is negative; if the air is hotter than the ground, it's a positive number. Over a strip of image, the value varies from negative to positive. So, I'm interested how, over a ROI, the temp changes over some location.

Angie
