
Subject: Re: orthogonal distance regression
Posted by Craig Markwardt on Tue, 25 Oct 2005 15:37:21 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Steve.Morris@libero.it writes:

- > Does anybody know if somewhere on the net there's a package to perform
- > orthogonal distance regression ?
- >
- > I have found odrpack from netlib.org, but I was just wondering whether
- > an already idl cocked package exists...
- >
- > More generally, if anybody has already used such a technique, advices
- > or tutorial are welcome :)

ODR has been discussed before on this newsgroup. I'm not aware of any package in IDL. A curve fitting program like MPFIT would need to be modified pretty significantly to accomodate the ODR aspects. [*] In the past I've referred people to ODRPACK and they've been very happy (except that it's not native IDL).

Craig

[*] - actually, the changes are not huge. It might be an interesting project for someone.

--

Craig B. Markwardt, Ph.D. EMAIL: craigmnet@REMOVEcow.physics.wisc.edu
Astrophysics, IDL, Finance, Derivatives | Remove "net" for better response
