> P.S. Sorry if I appear to be a little out of sorts.
> It happens to me every time I teach an IDL class and > have to apologise all day long about windows that don't > resize, and colors that are incomprehensible, TV commands > that don't display images in color, etc, etc. Shouldn't > someone be paying attention to the essentials that people > use every day instead of dreaming up yet more iTool functionality > that no one I know wants to use? Just my 2 cents worth of ranting.

Hahahah, that's so funny. I totally agree with you. I used to use Matlab, and plotting with colors and symbols and resizing and zooming are soooo much easier. I just got those emails about iTool...so I know what you mean...

Angie