
Subject: Re: display line numbers in idlde?

Posted by Jo Klein on Tue, 31 Jan 2006 15:52:56 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

VNC is the better option there - not so ugly to install, and client is available for just about anything with a screen.

Jo

Ricardo Bugalho schrieb:

> Hello,

> If you don't wish to install Linux and IDL for Linux on your laptop, you > can also try remote graphic access to your server, by using a Xserver > for windows.

> <http://x.cygwin.com/> is free AFAIK and there a number of comercial > options.

> You'll need X11 forwarding activated on your ssh server.

>

>

> On Mon, 2006-01-30 at 20:43 -0800, swingnut@gmail.com wrote:

>

>> Ok, my preferred solution would actually be to running idl locally (as >> opposed to ssh to a server) in Linux, editing in kwrite, at full >> resolution of my laptop, but since I don't feel like wrestling with the >> Sisyphean task of achieving all that while trying to get something >> done, I ordered the Windows version of IDL. I'm using idlde because I >> can't get idl to compile the pro files in my current working directory
>> -- it compiles the library routines I call but won't compile my files >> when called. idlde allows my to load them all at once and compile them >> all at once, but I still need line numbers because ctrl+g is cumbersome >> to be constantly hitting about every minute. So, is there a way to get >> idlde to show line numbers of the currently displayed file?

>>

>

>
