Subject: Re: Getting plot coor by clicking on plot??
Posted by rep2857 on Mon, 07 Aug 1995 07:00:00 GMT

In article <3vtm5g$2b3@lace.colorado.edu>,
Andy Loughe <afl@cdc.noaa.gov> wrote:
> In article <3vtcbk$5ta@deadbird.db.erau.edu>, antarcti@news.db.erau.edu () writes:
> |> I was wondering if it is possible to click on an IDL plot window and
> |> get the plot coordinates for use in the program? Also is it
> |> possible to draw on the plot window and save the line coordinates
> |> in terms of the x and y scale coordinates?
> |>
>
> Look at a routine called cursor.
>

And if you're considering doing this with widgets, look into the event.x and event.y elements of the event structure.

I'm not sure what's meant in the second part of the original question.
My guess is that you are trying to transform scales. If so, check out the convert_coord routine and the various switches associated with it.

Mike Schienle   Hughes Santa Barbara Research Center
Home: mgs@seldon.terminus.com   Work: rep2857@sbsun0010.sbrc.hac.com
    Contract Employee - Will visualize data for large amounts of money