

---

Subject: Re: Julian Day Question

Posted by Greg Hennessy on Fri, 26 May 2006 11:40:11 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

On 2006-05-26, David Fanning <davidf@dfanning.com> wrote:

> Clearly, I am missing something important here. :-(

A Julian day technically starts at noon.

A Modified Julian Day starts at midnight, and is defined by taking the julian day and subtracting 2400000.5.

The difference between starting at noon and starting at midnight has caused way more bugs that you might believe.

---