

---

Subject: using Catalyst Library

Posted by swrush on Wed, 26 Jul 2006 12:42:28 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Hi, Folks!

I've got some questions on Catalyst Library, which is available on David Fanning's website. I found it very useful and powerful, and actually want to know some more details, especially various properties of objects used in this library. I tried 'annotatewindow.pro' and browsed the source code, to find that various specific objects like 'CatImage', 'ColorTool', 'AnnotateInteraction', etc. used in this code. Unfortunately, I couldn't find any detailed explanation on their usage or related 'object properties'. I read that detailed description of this library is not yet to come as a book or an official document. Anyway, is there any possibility of getting any unofficial material concerning this library? My interest is the objects and their detailed properties.

One more question is about legal limitation on using this library. Actually, I'm developing an IDL application to be supplied to a governmental research institute. And I found this library includes several useful functions necessary for my IDL application program. Then, is there any legal limitation on using this library for such purpose? If so, I wonder how I can get permission to use it.

I found that Dr. Fanning is on travel so that he cannot respond to such questions right now. I hope I can hear from any other person who is related with this library.

---