
Subject: Re: Annoying message about X11 Resources on Solaris.
Posted by mchinand on Tue, 30 Jan 2007 05:55:04 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article <epm350$4l7$1@dennis.cc.strath.ac.uk>,
Allan Whiteford <allan-remove-this-@-and-this.phys-dot-strath.ac.uk> wrote:

> JJ wrote:

>>

>> I recently upgraded from IDL 6.2 to 6.3 on a Solaris 8 platform, and now >> when I open an IDL window the first time, I get the following messages:

>>

>> Where could these resources possibly be getting set????

>>

>

> Thousands of places :).

>

> A strong possibility is that in the dim and distant past a system admin > set things up to be helpful. It looks like you're getting a warning > message not because they are set but because they are different what are > set in your IDL preferences. This could be why you're getting different > behaviour from other users.

>

> I tracked down a Solaris 8 box (I think it's Solaris 8 anyway: 5.8

> Generic_117000-03 sun4u sparc SUNW,Ultra-5_10) and a system-wide > possibility is:

>

> /usr/openwin/lib/Xdefaults

>

Or maybe in the following directory:

/usr/X/lib/app-defaults

--

Michael Chinander, PhD
m-chinander@uchicago.edu
Department of Radiology
University of Chicago
