Subject: Re: ENVI does a dumb thing reading a TIFF file with a palette included
Posted by David Fanning on Wed, 02 May 2007 19:43:37 GMT

Ed Hyer writes:

> I hesitate to use the term "bug", but what > ENVI is doing here is at best a poor choice. ENVI has its own > (somewhat clunky) color table functionality, why can't it load the > palette as a palette? Am I wrong to think this is how ENVI "should" > treat TIFF files?

I don't know. I just know there are an awful lot of people paying good money for graphics cards they don't use. :-)

Cheers,

David

P.S. Let's just say that if you subscribe to my view that ENVI is the only hope IDL programmers have of getting usable functionality into IDL in the future, you would be crazy to say a bad word about it. :-)

--
David Fanning, Ph.D.
Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: http://www.dfanning.com/
Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")