
Subject: Re: Interesting property of sort

Posted by David Fanning on Wed, 16 May 2007 13:50:21 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

cmancone@ufl.edu writes:

> excellent point, thanks for the tip. Out of curiosity, does bsort add > a lot of overhead compared to a regular sort?

I don't know. I rarely sort a million things. :-)

My experience with NASA Astronomy routines is that there are fewer IDL programs any better. This is a bubble sort. Not the fastest sorting algorithm in the world, probably. But at least you know it is accurate.

Cheers,

David

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>

Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")
