Despite having worked with a laptop day in day out, I only landed up with aching wrists, strained neck and back; with my work still pending. I could quote several reasons for it - my laptop processor runs too hot, my laptop keeps slipping from the pillow, plus the aching back. I know most of you agree with me. Now let me share with you the absolutely comfortable solution I found. It's called the laptop desk which revolutionized the whole process of computing for me with it's ergonomic design and heat dissipating ventilation channels. I highly recommend it, check it for yourself - www.laptopdesk.net
