
Subject: Re: read_tiff only looks in current working directory?
Posted by [Paul Van Delst\[1\]](#) on Wed, 31 Oct 2007 22:38:39 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

David Fanning wrote:

> Jeff N. writes:

>

>> A couple of times now i've run into a strange problem that i haven't >> had time to pay much attention to until now. I'm simply trying to >> read a tiff file with READ_TIFF, but this code fails:

>>

>> indir = 'g:\'

>> infile = 'test.tif'

>> inpath = indir + infile

>>

>> ;cd,indir

>>

>> indata=read_tiff(infile)

>> help, indata

>>

>> It fails with a file not found error even though I know that the file >> is in the location i'm specifying. Also, the error message prints out >> the full path to the file it's looking for, and it is looking for the >> correct file name, but the directory path it's looking in is always >> the current working directory. So, if i uncomment the call to the CD >> command above, the file gets read with no problem. Has anyone else >> come across this? This isn't the way it's supposed to work is it?

>

> Uh, maybe you want this command:

>

> indata = read_tiff(inpath)

>

> That might work better. :-)

I think I can hear Jeff's "d'oh!" way over here.... :o)

cheers,

paulv
