Subject: Re: read_tiff only looks in current working directory?
Posted by Jeff N. on Thu, 01 Nov 2007 16:03:00 GMT

On Oct 31, 6:05 pm, "Jeff N." <jnett...@utk.edu> wrote:
> On Oct 31, 6:01 pm, "Jeff N." <jnett...@utk.edu> wrote:
>
>
>
>> Hi folks,
>
>> A couple of times now i've run into a strange problem that i haven't >> had time to pay much attention to until now. I'm simply trying to >> read a tiff file with READ_TIFF, but this code fails:
>
>> indir = 'g:\'
>> infile = 'test.tif'
>> inpath = indir + infile
>
>> ;cd,indir
>
>> indata=read_tiff(infile)
>> help, indata
>
>> It fails with a file not found error even though I know that the file >> is in the location i'm specifying. Also, the error message prints out >> the full path to the file it's looking for, and it is looking for the >> correct file name, but the directory path it's looking in is always >> the current working directory. So, if i uncomment the call to the CD >> command above, the file gets read with no problem. Has anyone else >> come across this? This isn't the way it's supposed to work is it?
>
>> Jeff
>
> BTW, I should add that I don't see this behavior with every tiff file
> I try to read. It appears sporadically, and with tiff files created > by different means.

UGHHH!!!! I wish you could erase posts sometimes!! :(