That's what the "infopops" are for (just float the mouse over something and it pops up). And control+space for completion.

Also, font sizes for the title tabs can be changed, but it doesn't change the size of the Tabs themselves. David, maybe you can group your tabs together in a single view so that they only take up one line? Also, you can set some views as "fast views" by clicking on the icon in the bottom left of the gui - then you get these hidden views on the status bar the you can pop up and pop down quickly. I think this would be nice for, say, Variables or Command History - they are nice to look at every now and then, but I don't want them take up my real estate. In fact, you can make the Project Explorer a "fast view" too.
