On Dec 5, 5:16 pm, David Fanning <n...@dfanning.com> wrote:
> Vince Hradil writes:
>> Not if you just check the "update Path" box - then the Path will be >> updated when you load the appropriate workspace with the appropriate >> project(s).
>
> This won't work, because I don't just want the project(s) > on the path. I want coyote, and astro, and jhuapl, and > markwart, and all the rest of it. And, of course, if I > bring all of those into the project I would probably > be spending a fortune at Starbuck's every morning as > I waited for all the code to be "analyzed".
>
> I think the real solution (and a possible motive, now > that I think about it) is to just open IDL on January > 1st and leave it open the whole rest of the year. ;-)
>
>> Or you could just set the same path for all workspaces?
>
> This is what I see as a lot of work and subject to errors.
>
> Cheers,
>
> David
>
> --
> David Fanning, Ph.D.
> Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
> Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming:http://www.dfanning.com/
> Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")

Sorry, but it seems like you want your cake and it eat, too.

If you open the project and allow IDL to manage the code, it will "Analyze the code..."
If you set a path including all the subdirectories that you don't want as projects, it will "Analyze the code..."

I think your January 1st idea is the best, yet, but why wait until the new year?