
Subject: Re: question about paths/workspace
Posted by R.G.Stockwell on Wed, 05 Dec 2007 22:41:53 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

"Vince Hradil" <hradilv@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:ad45793c-59f1-4ce3-af1b-1562b8811b23@v4g2000hsf.google.roups.com...
> On Dec 5, 2:02 pm, "R.G. Stockwell" <noem...@please.com> wrote:
>> "Vince Hradil" <hrad...@yahoo.com> wrote in message
>>
>> news:5896e153-b4ef-4f90-882f-6848389bf05a@r60g2000hsc.google groups.com...
>>
>>
>>
>>> On Dec 5, 12:16 pm, "R.G. Stockwell" <noem...@please.com> wrote:
>>>> I have my idl code on a networked raided backedup drive,
>>>> but often take my laptop away from that network.
>>
>>>> So I have my path setup to look for the network first (drive H say) >>>> then look on the laptop (drive C). It works pretty well.
>>
>>>> If I put my 'workspace' on H, and am off the network,
>>>> I get 'workspace cannot be found' errors and it forces >>>> me to create a new one.
>>
>>>> Anyone have a good solution to using travelling workspaces?
>>>> I haven't really looked into the problem much yet, maybe it's >>>> a stupid question with an obvious answer.
>>
>>>> Cheers,
>>>> bob
>>
>>> Can you just create your workspace on the C-drive, but create projects >>> from your remote (H) drive. The workspace won't copy the files from >>> the H-drive, but just keep a reference to them.
>>
>> Short answer, no. Not if I want to access my workspace >> from somewhere other than my laptop (which I often do).
>> The C drive is only accessible from the laptop.
>>
>> Cheers,
>> bob
>
> How about just making workspaces everywhere that point to the same > projects? Isn't a workspace just a group of projects?

We'll see how it goes. I am worried about pointing to a project that "isn't there", but I have not done that yet.

Cheers,
bob
