
Subject: Re: question about paths/workspace
Posted by Vince Hradil on Wed, 05 Dec 2007 21:38:07 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Dec 5, 2:02 pm, "R.G. Stockwell" <noem...@please.com> wrote:
> "Vince Hradil" <hrad...@yahoo.com> wrote in message
>
> news:5896e153-b4ef-4f90-882f-6848389bf05a@r60g2000hsc.google groups.com...
>
>
>
>> On Dec 5, 12:16 pm, "R.G. Stockwell" <noem...@please.com> wrote:
>>> I have my idl code on a networked raided backedup drive,
>>> but often take my laptop away from that network.
>
>>> So I have my path setup to look for the network first (drive H say) >>> then look on the laptop (drive C). It works pretty well.
>
>>> If I put my 'workspace' on H, and am off the network,
>>> I get 'workspace cannot be found' errors and it forces >>> me to create a new one.
>
>>> Anyone have a good solution to using travelling workspaces?
>>> I haven't really looked into the problem much yet, maybe it's >>> a stupid question with an obvious answer.
>
>>> Cheers,
>>> bob
>
>> Can you just create your workspace on the C-drive, but create projects >> from your remote (H) drive. The workspace won't copy the files from >> the H-drive, but just keep a reference to them.
>
> Short answer, no. Not if I want to access my workspace > from somewhere other than my laptop (which I often do).
> The C drive is only accessible from the laptop.
>
> Cheers,
> bob

How about just making workspaces everywhere that point to the same projects? Isn't a workspace just a group of projects?
