Subject: Re: question about paths/workspace Posted by R.G.Stockwell on Wed, 05 Dec 2007 20:02:02 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

"Vince Hradil" <hradilv@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:5896e153-b4ef-4f90-882f-6848389bf05a@r60g2000hsc.google groups.com...

- > On Dec 5, 12:16 pm, "R.G. Stockwell" <noem...@please.com> wrote:
- >> I have my idl code on a networked raided backedup drive,
- >> but often take my laptop away from that network.

>>

- >> So I have my path setup to look for the network first (drive H say)
- >> then look on the laptop (drive C). It works pretty well.

>>

- >> If I put my 'workspace' on H, and am off the network,
- >> I get 'workspace cannot be found' errors and it forces
- >> me to create a new one.

>>

- >> Anyone have a good solution to using travelling workspaces?
- >> I haven't really looked into the problem much yet, maybe it's
- >> a stupid question with an obvious answer.

>>

- >> Cheers,
- >> bob

>

- > Can you just create your workspace on the C-drive, but create projects
- > from your remote (H) drive. The workspace won't copy the files from
- > the H-drive, but just keep a reference to them.

Short answer, no. Not if I want to access my workspace from somewhere other than my laptop (which I often do). The C drive is only accessible from the laptop.

Cheers, bob