Subject: Re: Custom formatting under version 7.0? Posted by sbolin42 on Thu, 06 Dec 2007 20:21:11 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Dec 6, 11:38 am, "mgal...@gmail.com" <mgal...@gmail.com> wrote:

> On Dec 6, 9:54 am, "Jim Pendleton, ITT Visual Information Solutions"

>

- > <jimp@no_spam.ittvis.com> wrote:
- >> To follow up on Doug's comment, creating templates for IDLdoc-style
- >> comments also helps discourage laziness in documenting one's code.
- >> Now if only I could attach keyboard accelerators to individual template
- >> insertion commands...

>

- > I've created some templates for writing classes/subclass (getProperty,
- > setProperty, cleanup, init, and ___define, plus comment headers). Very
- > handy. My one issue is that it indents every line, so I have to select
- > all and move left. I don't see a way to fix that (and ITT VIS's
- > function and procedure templates do it too).

>

- > Mike
- > --www.michaelgalloy.com
- > Tech-X Corporation
- > Software Developer II

Mike,

It should insert the template at the current cursor position. If you are in column 1 of the editor when you select CTRL+SPACE, and then pick your template, it should insert it beginning in column 1. This is not the behavior you are seeing?

Scott Bolin ITTVis