
Subject: M,I`5'Persec ution , wh y won' t t he B ritish p olice do their job and p ut a st op to i t?

Posted by vefeife on Tue, 01 Jan 2008 14:09:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

- = why won't the British police do. their job and put a stop to it? - =

The British police obviously do know what is taking. place. Besides my interpretations of what. individual officers have said which forces that conclusion, it would be inconceivable. for them to be unaware of something on this. scale.

If they know, then they will know that the. abusers have broken laws in the UK and abroad. Recently the UK introduced laws against electronic. spying which carry. a penalty of several years jail if caught. If the police know illegal harassment is taking place, and do nothing about it, then they. are failing. in their responsibilities.

Last Easter (1995) I went into the local police station in. London and spoke to an officer about the harassment. against me. But I couldn't provide tangible evidence; what people said, in many cases years ago, is. beyond proof, and without something to support. my statements I cannot expect a police officer to take. the complaint seriously.

The current situation with regard to the police is not one which allows. a breakthrough in dealing with. the problem. On the one hand, most individual officers at a local police. station may not know about the ongoing assaults, so a complaint at that level. will not yield results. Yet the police as an organisation do know. of the harassment, and they must be aware that a complaint has been made at a. police station. So it is clearly their duty to take. preventative action against the continuing molestation, but because the criminals are operating on behalf of a state agency, the. police are not carrying out. their duty.

340
