
Subject: Re: putting data into .kml (google earth) from IDL

Posted by Jeff N. on Wed, 09 Jan 2008 21:04:45 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Jan 9, 2:48 pm, james-a-roo <james.mccrei...@gmail.com> wrote:

> Hello-

>

> I'm thinking about undertaking some work to be able to take data > structures or arrays in IDL and visualize them in google earth. The > idea is to build an object orient set of codes which will write the > data into .kml files.

>

> Has anyone begun this or thought about it? I'm going over the .kml > specs and making some headway, but i clearly dont have then entire > picture yet. I have a small goal of getting some (extruded to the > ground) polygons working in the very near future.

>

> thanks,

>

> jlm

Mike Galloy has some user functions written for sending data from ENVI into Google Earth via KML files. You might be able to take the portion of his code that deals with writing KML files and use that as a starting point.

<http://michaelgalloy.com/category/envi>

Jeff
