Subject: Re: Releasing memory in IDL
Posted by Jaime on Thu, 24 Jan 2008 05:07:47 GMT

Thank you very much! this does free the memory and is very easy to implement.

Regards,
Jaime

> Humm. Well, about what I expected, to be honest with you. :-)
>
> Here is what I would do. Write a new procedure, named > Cleanup_Clumpfind, and declare the two common blocks > in that. Then, just run UNDEFINE on all the variables > in the common blocks. You can run them 10 at a time > with the new undefine.pro:
>
>   http://www.dfanning.com/programs/undefine.pro
>
> Then, when you are finished with one analysis, and before > you start the next, run your Cleanup_Clumpfile program.
> That should make things manageable.
>
> Cheers,
>
> David
> --
> David Fanning, Ph.D.
> Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
> Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming:http://www.dfanning.com/
> Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")