
Subject: Re: printing edges in Normal coordinates
Posted by David Fanning on Fri, 25 Jan 2008 19:47:54 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Ryan. writes:

- > Does anyone know what the margin of the printing area is in normal
- > coordinates? I have a feeling it might depend on the printer, but I
- > don't know. I am printing some text using the XYOUTS procedure and it
- > isn't showing all of it. I would like to know how much I need to adjust
- > it to display properly.
- >
- > BTW I'm using the PS device.

Typically there is a quarter inch around the edge of a sheet of paper that can't be printed on. But, I'm guessing your problem is probably the size of the "window" you are creating on the PostScript page. Check out the ALIGNMENT keyword to XYOUTS, too.

Cheers,

David

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>

Seppure ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")
