Subject: Re: workbench filenames and program names
Posted by Vince Hradil on Wed, 30 Jan 2008 22:26:28 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Jan 30, 2:32 pm, elwood <epolo...@uwsp.edu> wrote:
> Probly a pretty remedial question----
>
> Often my students write a program called for tutorial1 example:
> pro tutorial1
>
> but the filename in which the program resides might be tut1.pro
>
> they can compile tut1.pro > but when they use the workbench to RUN the program it trys to run > a program called tut1, which of course doesnt exist.
> The program is called tutorial1
>
> Is there a way to tell workbench to run the actual program name rather > than the filename?
> or do they need to use the commandline?
>
> I looked around on the help pages, but didnt see a quick answer to > this question,
> I'll keep looking.
>
> Thx,
> Elisha

If it is in a project by itself, you can change the properties of the project to run tutoriall.
Project->Properties->IDL Project Properties->Run Command