Has anyone found a solution to the original problem? I too want to store projects outside the workspace, keeping them closed unless I'm working on them. I'd like to automatically change directory to the project's directory when I open a project, so that when I run the project it runs from that directory (just like when running a .sav file from that directory). I guess this is not currently possible?
So I have to either (A) set the "change directory on open" editor preference and open the project's main .pro file before running, or (B) use something like David's ProgramRootDir in my code?
