Subject: Re: Paths in the Workbench Posted by David Fanning on Mon, 31 Mar 2008 21:51:43 GMT View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Vince writes:

- > To use the custom build just create an idl batch file with the compile
- > commands and save it. Then point to that batch file for the custom
- > build.

>

- > For example, say you have a procedure called foo in foo.pro. You
- > could make a text file called compile_foo which may contain:
- > cd, 'c:\foodir'
- > PATH='c:\foodir;c:\neededbyfoodir;'+!PATH
- > .comp foo
- > resolve all
- > save, /routines, file='foo.sav'

I wish it were that simple. Unfortunately, this particular project contains upwards of 100 files, and most of those are objects, which RESOLVE_ALL doesn't care much for. :-(

Cheers.

David

P.S. I have a feeling IDL 6.4 might be good for a few more years, no matter how much money we thrown into the ITTVIS coffers.