

---

Subject: Re: Paths in the Workbench

Posted by David Fanning on Mon, 31 Mar 2008 17:03:25 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Mike writes:

- > I do not let the Workbench manage my paths. I did have some pain until
- > I discovered the checkbox to have the Workbench not change my path.

I have been trying to give it the benefit of the doubt. If I turn every feature off (which is pretty much what I have done), then the Workbench is a worse editor than the one in IDL 6.4 and with a memory footprint 10-12 times its previous size. Please tell me there are some redeeming features I've overlooked here. :-(

Even when I'm programming, if I pause to think, some "helpful" little widget pops up in front of my cursor, obscuring my view and irritating the hell out of me. Maybe code completion is de riguer among the young generation, but damn it, I KNOW how to type! I'm just friggin' THINKING!!!

Cheers,

David

---