
Subject: Re: Reading HTML (web) page through socket
Posted by JeremyFaden on Fri, 18 Apr 2008 13:31:27 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Can you do a HEAD request, then look for content-length in the response?
Jeremy

Jeremy Faden

On Apr 9, 2:11 pm, rhyme2ri2 <rhyme2ri2@gmail.com> wrote:

> Hello all,
>
> I want to read an html(web) page. I am able to do this using socket > but the problem is that i don't know the size of the page. Is there > any possible way to know the size of page before reading it using > sockets. The size is needed as i need to allocate buffer on the basis > of this size.
>
> Or, if there is a better way to read an html(web) page in idl then > please let me know.
>
> Thanks & Regards
> -Ritu
