
Subject: Re: Report on Numerical Analysis Techniques Session

Posted by Mort Canty on Fri, 30 May 2008 11:19:40 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

David Fanning schrieb:

> Folks,

>

> <snip>

>

> The final presentation of the day was by Peter Messmer of > Tech-X Corporation. His company has developed some IDL code > that allows you to take advantage of the processing capability > built into the 128 processors of your graphics card! Wow.
> For the right application, this could be extremely useful.
> Best of all, Tech-X is making it available free (using a GPL > license) for people to take advantage of. They plan to make > their money by using this as an introduction to the companies > other parallel processing products.

>

> <http://www.txcorp.com/technologies/GPULib/index.php>

>

> Overall, I thought it was a useful seminar. I learned a couple > of things, had my prejudices about iTools confirmed, and spent > a pleasant morning in good company. I appreciate ITTVIS doing > this kind of outreach. If you have a chance to attend a seminar,
> I would highly recommend it.

>

> Cheers,

>

> David

>

Thanks, David. Did Peter Messmer say anything about GPULib availability for Windows? Just tried to grab it, but it's only for Linux so far.

Cheers,

Mort
