
Subject: Re: UNIX Resize Problem

Posted by liamgumley on Fri, 31 Oct 2008 15:06:55 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Oct 31, 9:11 am, David Fanning <n...@dfanning.com> wrote:

> liamgum...@gmail.com writes:

>> I write a GUI demo for my book (described in Chapter 9) where an image >> is displayed in a resizable widget. If you resize the GUI window, the >> window retains the size you selected, and the image is redrawn inside >> the window while maintaining the image aspect ratio
>

> Well, it's not what I want, but it may be what > I end up with if I don't solve this problem soon.
> I do know how to display an image in a way that > keeps it's aspect ratio. What I'm trying to do is > keep all that extra space in the window out of > the equation. :-)

Fair enough. I just like the idea that if I resize the window, it stays at the size I selected, rather than jumping to some other size. That's the way my Safari web browser works when I'm looking at an image, so it's a familiar behavior.

Liam.
