

---

Subject: Keeping Up with the News

Posted by David Fanning on Sun, 04 Jan 2009 01:53:27 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Folks,

This doesn't have much to do with IDL, but in perusing the latest web statistics from Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming, I was surprised to see how quickly people were hitting new articles I have posted. And then I noticed that a large percentage of these people were coming from Google Reader. This led me to investigate a resource that most of you probably already know about. (I'm always about the last person to learn about these kinds of things.)

Anyway, I've now set up a Google Reader account and I've subscribed to some of my favorite web pages (Mike Galloy's, etc.) For the first time in a LONG time I feel like I am finally on top of the news!

<http://reader.google.com/>

Some of you Luddites might be interested in joining me. :-)

Happy New Year!

David

P.S. Sometime in the next week or so, I should get the two millionth page download since I installed my web stats. Naturally, I have a big party planned. Stay tuned...

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>

Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")

---