
Subject: Re: Running IDL remotely - problems with xwindows

Posted by anne on Tue, 06 Jan 2009 18:52:09 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Jan 2, 10:17 pm, Craig Markwardt <cbmarkwa...@gmail.com> wrote:

> On Jan 2, 4:18 pm, Reimar Bauer <R.Ba...@fz-juelich.de> wrote:

>

>

>

>> Hi Anne

>

>> try <http://freenx.berlios.de>(FreeNX) and nxclient from <http://www.nomachin.com>.

>> The clients are for several OS's.

>

>> I like the speed and the reconnect option. That means you can shutdown >> your client computer without stopping the processes on the server. You >> can reconnect later and look at the results.

>

> I can confirm that FreeNX works really well for speeding up Xwindows > connections, especially interactive ones. Alas, our sys-admins no > long allow it. Also alas, it's another software installation that you > have to do.

>

> Craig

The NX software does do the trick. It works really well and solves a lot of other problems for me as well, so thanks for the info! The only snag is that the free server is limited to 2 users and these are the first 2 users to connect to the system so don't get your sysadmin person to try it first or you will have wasted a spot (like I just did)!

Anne
