
Subject: Re: creating dynamic array

Posted by Juggernaut on Wed, 07 Jan 2009 13:22:40 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Jan 6, 5:55 pm, David Fanning <n...@dfanning.com> wrote:

> nakisa writes:

>> I have a file of data of >> x,y,L .

>

>> I need to compare of L with a fix value and plot (x,y) with less " L "

>> with one color and the other (x,y) with other color.

>

>> The problem is I need to compare L ,then store the x and y s in new >> variable , for example new_1 and new2 ,then plot them.

>

>> Fro this plot, I think the only way is to store data in array. but I >> need dynamic array and I don't know how can I create dynamic array ?

>

> I'm guessing the WHERE function might be your friend.

>

> IDL> ? where

>

> Cheers,

>

> David

>

> --

> David Fanning, Ph.D.

> Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

> Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming:<http://www.dfanning.com/>

> Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")

And pointers could be useful for dynamic arrays.
