
Subject: Re: Processing Mail with IDL

Posted by trond on Thu, 04 Jul 1996 07:00:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

In article <4r91if$hdK@rs18.hrz.th-darmstadt.de>,
Norbert Hahn <hahn@hrz.th-darmstadt.de> wrote:

> Hi,

>

> I would like to write a IDL program which receive a mail and depending on the > mail body changes entries in a data base. After processing the mail sender > should get a reply. The data base already exists and the processing routines > have been written in IDL. Sending a mail can be done easily by writing the mail > body into a file and spawning the unix mail command.

>

> But how do I read a mail from within IDL ?

>

> Norbert

>

>

if you're on a unix system, I can't see any problems with letting IDL slurp up your /usr/mail/hahn and sort things out.
But why use a spanner to hammer in a nail? I would do it all in perl.

trond

--

+-----+
| Trond S. Trondsen [VE6NOR] [<http://www.ucalgary.ca/~tstronds/pai/pai.html>] |
| Institute for Space Research, Calgary, Canada [trondsen@phys.ucalgary.ca] |
+-----+
