Subject: Re: IDLDOC 3.2 Index page not as interesting as it could be... Posted by Michael Galloy on Mon, 15 Jun 2009 23:04:18 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

```
Gianguido Cianci wrote:
```

- > Not sure how many of you use IDLDOC to document your code. I like it a
- > lot.
- >
- > I have noticed that when I run it, if I got to the 'Overview' I see a
- > list of directories where my code is stored. If I click on one of
- > those directories I see a list of procedures, with the 1st sentence of
- > the description underneath each one.
- >
- > Something like:
- > >
 - arraypad.pro

>

- Pads arrays on each side with zeros or a user supplied
- > value.

>

- > However, when I go to the "Index" section, I get mu less interesting
- > info:

>

- > arraypad
- > routine in arraypad.pro
- > arraypad.pro
- > .pro file in ./ directory

>

- > Is there a way to get the "Index" section to also display the 1st
- > sentence of the documentation?
- > Wouldn't it be more interesting to have this first sentence appear
- > under the procedures in the "categories" page? Am I missing
- > something?

No, there isn't a way to do this currently, but this is a good idea. I've created a feature request for this in IDLdoc 3.3:

http://idldoc.idldev.com/ticket/53

Mike

--

www.michaelgalloy.com Associate Research Scientist Tech-X Corporation