Unfortunately, you can't use ENVI-routines within a virtual machine without a legal ENVI license at the moment. You have to decide, whether the user must have ENVI or not. If you choose it is a 'must', then you can easily adapt your IDL code. If not, you have to script everything ENVI does on your own (widgets, objects, import of native envi files and so on). I'm in the same situation and still waiting for a solution coming from Ittvis.

At the moment I think it is not possible, but may be someone has found a solution for this dilemma...
