I have been looking for information about a virtual machine for Envi in this forum and have found only the following message of December 2006.

An ENVI license is necessary. The last time I asked there were no plans to implement an ENVI virtual machine either.

Robert Moss, Ph.D.

Is this still true two years and a half later?

In case there is not virtual machine for envi, does anyone know of a way of distributing plugin applications in Envi to a any Windows XP user without a Envi licence? Is this possible?

Thanks in advance for your response.
