
Subject: Re: IDLDOC 3.2 Index page not as interesting as it could be...

Posted by Michael Galloy on Mon, 13 Jul 2009 19:05:16 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

mgalloy wrote:

> Gianguido Cianci wrote:

>> Not sure how many of you use IDLDOC to document your code. I like it a >> lot.

>>

>> I have noticed that when I run it, if I got to the 'Overview' I see a >> list of directories where my code is stored. If I click on one of >> those directories I see a list of procedures, with the 1st sentence of >> the description underneath each one.

>>

>> Something like:

>>

>> arraypad.pro

>>

>> Pads arrays on each side with zeros or a user supplied >> value.

>>

>>

>> However, when I go to the "Index" section, I get mu less interesting >> info:

>>

>> arraypad

>> routine in arraypad.pro

>> arraypad.pro

>> .pro file in ./ directory

>>

>> Is there a way to get the "Index" section to also display the 1st >> sentence of the documentation?

>> Wouldn't it be more interesting to have this first sentence appear >> under the procedures in the "categories" page? Am I missing >> something?

>

> No, there isn't a way to do this currently, but this is a good idea.

> I've created a feature request for this in IDLdoc 3.3:

>

> <http://idldoc.idldev.com/ticket/53>

This feature is now in the trunk. You can check it out with Subversion:

svn co <http://svn.idldev.com/idldoc/trunk/idldoc>

Mike

--

www.michaelgalloy.com

