

---

Subject: Re: newbie workbench question

Posted by revengineer on Fri, 25 Sep 2009 19:30:47 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

On Sep 25, 1:56 pm, "JohnSmith" <some...@microsoft.com> wrote:

- > i am used to using the hot keys in pre=workbench IDLs.
- >
- > in idl 7.1, how can I "reset" idl, compile a program, and run it.
- > Often I have a main level piece of code, and I stop at various
- > points (or in called routines) and look at the data, etc.
- > Then I make a change to the code, and I want to reset it
- > all and run the whole thing again.
- >
- > ctrl-s (to save the file)
- > ctrl-r (to 'reset' IDL)
- > ctrl-F5 (to compile)
- > f5 (to run the new code).
- >
- > seems like in the workbench, there is no "reset", and if I just
- > make a change to the main code, then compile it and run it (Ctrl-F8)
- > that it tries to continue from the stopped spot. The only way to
- > run it new again is to go to the RUN menu, and find the "run
- > currentfile.pro"
- > item and click on that.
- >
- > Using the mouse that much is giving me tennis elbow. I need
- > a hot key to access that "run current file" action. any help?

try .f

---