
Subject: Re: Works on Linux, not on MacOS
Posted by penteado on Fri, 05 Mar 2010 15:49:26 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On Mar 5, 12:41 pm, wlandsman <wlands...@gmail.com> wrote:
> You are telling find.pro (<http://idlastro.gsfc.nasa.gov/ftp/pro/idlphot/find.pro>) > that the approximate FWHM of sources on your image is 0.02 > pixels. This is not a plausible value, and results in the spurious > centroid positions.
>
> So why does it work on your Linux machine? I suspect you have an > older version of find.pro that used a more simplistic (but evidently > more robust) centroid algorithm. --Wayne

Now it sounds like a path issue. It seems that IDL is not calling the same find.pro he thinks it is (the one that is the same used in the Linux computer). He should check with `file_which('find.pro')` on both computers, to make sure it is the same file.
