

---

Subject: Decided on Trail Name

Posted by David Fanning on Sat, 07 Aug 2010 00:04:11 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Folks,

Many thanks for so many things. This has been the very best community I have ever had the privilege of associating with for a very long time. It's possible I'll be back. I don't know.

And thanks for so many great suggestions for books to read on my trip. As a result of carrying many of your suggestions with me, I've decided on the trail name BookLover. It will make me smile every time I take that damn pack off my back and introduce myself. Plus, it's totally retro.

I'll won't be blogging in real-time, but I will be hitting the trail with a whole crowd of Pacific Crest Trail thru-hikers who are reaching Oregon at the same time I am. If I manage to tell enough Coyote stories someone is sure to mention me in a blog entry:

<http://postholer.com/journal/search.php>

I'll let you know in a month or so if I survived. :-)

Adios!

David

P.S. Let's just say even if you can't be young again, it's still possible to feel like a young man every once in a while. :-)

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>

Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")

---