On 29 Okt., 23:13, David Fanning <n...@dfanning.com> wrote:
> David Fanning writes:
>> I've noticed two interesting trends lately. People complaining that >> their figures are smarter than than brains, and more typos
>> in my own posts than I think reasonable.
>
> My goodness! This is exactly what I am talking about!
> "Figures" instead of "fingers".
>
> Can anyone recommend a good brain food. :-(
>
> Cheers,
>
> David
>
> --
> David Fanning, Ph.D.
> Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.
> Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming:http://www.dfanning.com/
> Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")

Nope, you are just a human. That's all. Nothing to complain. Do you really what to be a person which claims to NOT make any mistakes?
Forget my English, but maybe you get an idea what I mean. Altruistic help should always cover any dinky typos or things which may also characterise you...

Nice weekend

A guy who is thinking that the IDL way is not only a coding style

CR