
Subject: Re: Viewing and Printing PostScript Files
Posted by Carsten Lechte on Thu, 16 Dec 2010 16:46:19 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

On 16/12/10 16:34, David Fanning wrote:
> What do you use to view and print PostScript files?

I still like to use gv on Unix/Linux to look at eps files, because it is very light-weight and displays the postscript coordinates of the location of the pointer. You can also magnify various areas of the page and view them in additional windows.

I find gv's ancient user interface tolerable for scrutinising eps files, but too taxing for multi-page documents, and you cannot select and copy text.

chl
