
Subject: Re: FSC_PLOT defaults

Posted by David Fanning on Tue, 21 Dec 2010 14:45:13 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Marc Buie writes:

> Just one warning on x/y/z.style. I have always used style=3 > since I don't like the ticks getting involved with the data.
> I know that others have their own preferences and that's fine.
> But, the `_biggest_` objection I have to the new `plot()` function > is that the `style=3` functionality is not supported. You get > `style=1` whether you want it or not. That one deficiency alone is > enough for me to turn my back on an otherwise promising new > method of plotting.

Wow! 25 years working with IDL and I didn't even know there was a `[XYZ]Style=3`. The things you learn... :-)

Neat!

Cheers,

David

--

David Fanning, Ph.D.

Fanning Software Consulting, Inc.

Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming: <http://www.dfanning.com/>

Sepore ma de ni thui. ("Perhaps thou speakest truth.")
