Folks,

I just happened to notice this today, but I have apparently lost a lot of subscribers to my web page updates when I changed to the domain idlcoyote.com.

If you are interested in knowing about new articles, code updates, and new programs on the Coyote's Guide to IDL Programming web page, you can subscribe here:

<http://www.idlcoyote.com/coyote.xml>

I use Google Reader to keep up with blogs and various web pages, but there are plenty of tools that allow you to find out what is going on by subscribing to these update services.

I fell behind doing updates for awhile when I was finishing up the book, but things have settled down a bit now, and I've started to keep the updates again in real time.

In particular, subscribing to these updates will allow you to know when Coyote Graphics programs are updated and changed.

Cheers,

David
