Folks,

Yikes! I know I am a few years behind the times (as my children reminded me repeatedly as I fumbled around with my new iPhone over the Christmas holidays), but I just accidentally dragged a picture out of my FireFox browser (thinking it was an IDL graphics window!) and put it in my Hypersnap raster viewing application. (The PNG file in the browser was converted to BMP file when it got to Hypersnap.)

Is this new!?

Yowser! There must be a good reason to do this!
I'm sure of it! ;-)

Cheers,

David

P.S. I just tried "Siri, put that damn picture on my phone!", but no luck. :-(
