Folks,

I have been getting out-of-the-blue PayPal payments the past couple of months from Kachingle. These payments (not much, a couple of dollars each month) are from Kachinglers who have signed up to support their favorite web pages with small micro-payments.

These payments not only go a long way toward making your favorite blogger or web site operator feel appreciated for their considerable efforts, but also helps them defray the out-of-pocket expenses they incur providing their services to their readers.

I have signed up to support the web pages and blogs that I frequent often. I am wondering if some of you would be interested in doing the same. The information provided on most blogs is not "free." Someone is paying the cost, in dollars, effort, and, occasionally, in professional and personal sacrifice. You might want to help them out with a small donation.

Cheers,

David
