

---

Subject: Re: WAV-files on webpages

Posted by Jonathan Miller on Wed, 05 Feb 1997 08:00:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Rob Frydryck <frydryck@nauticom.net> wrote in article

<32f89e48.629915@news.nauticom.net>...

> On 2 Feb 1997 12:47:48 GMT, "Peter" <petercal@glo.be> wrote:

>

>> I'm looking for a way how to create sound on a webpage in the form of a >> loop. For example I have a WAV-file, which I loop and you get non-stop >> sound.

>> How can I achieve this?

>>

>> You can send solutions to the following e-mail adress:

>> et@kan.be

>>

>> Thanks for your help.

>

>

> Do you REALLY want to do this??? Most of the time continuous sounds > are MIDI files not wav, and unless you have a REALLY INCREDIBLE track > your effort simply becomes annoying to the person viewing your page.

> I suggest you don't play continuous sounds.

>

I am guessing <backround src="sound.wav"> or something like that. Like Rob Frydryck stated, repeating sounds is an excellent way of keeping that web counter low. Even MIDI files are kinda annoying. I think the web should just stick to visual, not audio (I could name olfactory, taste, and touch, but that'd be one sick webpage anyway!) Regards,

Jonathan

---